

Wright Beauty Academy is Accredited by the National Accrediting Commission of Cosmetology Arts and Sciences

Under the current leadership of Tony Mirando, Executive Director of NACCAS, Wright Beauty Academy has been an accredited school since 1972. The standards set forth by the Commissions were established by an impartial non-government agency with an emphasis on educational performance. The accrediting of the very best schools and colleges by professional national associations has characterized the American educational arena for many years. Accreditation of schools has been the most reliable index of a school's concern for integrity toward its students and the quality of the education they provide.

The U.S Department of Education and the professional beauty industry recognizes NAACAS as an accrediting commission. Earning accreditation means that Wright Beauty Academy conforms to a common set of standards of excellence established by the commission. Our school is re-evaluated once every five years to maintain the established accreditation standards.

National accreditation recognition is a very comprehensive and important vehicle to mark the unique achievement for meeting the highest recognized criteria standards within the cosmetology industry. Not all schools are nationally accredited thus it makes Wright Beauty Academy recognized as none of the most prestigious leaders within the professional beauty industry.
